Why Conduct a CANVAS Pilot?

- SBOE is using CANVAS to support the Online Idaho initiative
- ISU is one of two higher education institutions in Idaho not currently using CANVAS
- SBOE funded the CANVAS pilot to provide ISU the opportunity to review its capabilities without a commitment

CANVAS Pilot Execution

- Why select the summer session for the CANVAS pilot:
 - The timeline to transition classes for a spring pilot was too short
 - The contract for the SBOE funding the pilot ends Sept. 1
- The Provost's Office worked with the Office of the Registrar to identify a potential of approximately 600 courses offered during Summer session to support a pilot program
 - 4, 8, and 16 week courses all considered

Faculty Incentive

- A stipend will be paid to faculty members participating in the pilot
 - The amount of that stipend will be based on the number of faculty members who participate and the number of courses they transition from Moodle
- The stipend formula being used:
 - A base stipend provided to a participant
 - An additional amount for those who transition more than one course

Signing Into CANVAS

- Beginning December 16th, faculty will have access to Canvas training and a sandbox for course development.
 - Faculty will have access to their courses on Feb 1.
 - Single Sign On (SSO) will be enabled and a link provided to login - this link can be bookmarked for easy access in the future

CANVAS Pilot Evaluation

- How will we evaluate the CANVAS pilot?
 - The LMS working group will develop a survey which they will distribute to the participating faculty and students to provide feedback on their experience and recommendations
- Once the CANVAS pilot is complete, the survey data will be provided to the Provost's Office and the LMS working group

CANVAS Decision Process

- Fall 2023, the LMS working group will make recommendations to the Provost
- A campus-wide comment period will be provided
- The Provost will then share a recommendation with the Faculty Senate, Deans Council, and ultimately, Leadership Council and Administrative Council for review and approval.
